Betty's Cookery School

No visit to York is complete without calling at Betty's Café Tea Rooms in St Helen's Square. Choose from an exclusive range of teas and coffees, all-day breakfast (but this is no greasy spoon!), lunch or something wicked from the cake trolley. And chocoholics beware – you'll never get past the display of handmade chocolates on the way out without succumbing to temptation. Betty's also offers 1 and 2 day cookery courses, covering a wide variety of subjects from bread making to family meals to advanced chocolate techniques. Most courses take place at weekends, and even teenagers can learn to cook during school holidays. Classes are given by Betty's own master bakers next to the craft bakery in Harrogate. www.bettysandtaylor.co.uk

Learning about Viking History at DIG

The JORVIK Group is proud to announce the first programme for Early Years Foundation Stage (EYFS), using innovative early year's area at DIG. With lots of fun resources including dressing up, puppets, storybooks and games, young learners are encouraged to discover history and archaeology in an engaging and enjoyable way. Launched in 2014, the special hour-long sessions are designed to enable youngsters to learn about archaeology first-hand and explore how archaeologists recreate the past. Learners are given the opportunity to dig for objects in specially recreated digging pits (with safe and clean play soil) and can handle genuine artefacts from 2000 years of York's history.

Sara Danesin Medio Cookery School

Masterchef Finalist 2011

Sara's cooking is a celebration of both her heritage and the wonderful local produce that the UK has to offer. Book one of the regular supper club dinners or request a tailor made cookery class to develop your knowledge and improve your techniques. Learn about Sara's original takes on classic Italian dishes, meet like-minded people and re-create fine dining in your own kitchen. All in all, Sara is ready to teach easily transferable skills and techniques that will not only improve your everyday cooking but also allow you to comfortably entertain your guests with confidence and no stress.
